DEMOGRAPHICS

POPULATION

Since 2015, New Braunfels' population has increased by 71%, a rate more than three times higher than that of the State of Texas. This rapid growth reflects the community's high quality of life, strong public school system, and strategic position along the San Antonio–Austin corridor. Major developments such as Veramendi and Mayfair, along with corporate expansions by companies like Lefko and Aumovio, underscore New Braunfels' appeal as a desirable place to live, work, and invest.

COMMUTING

New Braunfels employers draw workers from across the San Antonio–Austin corridor, though most residents still commute out for work. In 2023, slightly more workers commuted into the city than residents commuting out, resulting in a small net inflow of 165 workers overall, even as 73.3% of residents left the community for their jobs. This dynamic varies by income: for workers earning under $40,000, the city had a net inflow of 6,446 workers, while for those earning over $40,000, New Braunfels saw a net outflow of 8,888 workers, indicating that residents with higher-paying jobs still leave for work. This trend underscores the importance of our work to recruit new companies and support local business expansion: ensuring more residents can live and work in New Braunfels.
